It is much too long. When would a worker be expected to complete? at work? Would it be expected to be done on line? If so would it only be available to those with computers? Some workers have poor reading abilities and would not be able to complete. The $ reimbursement would then make it discriminatory. Which managers? collecting the info about practices and P&P would be extremely time consuming for most managers who would have to gather info. I would not take the time to complete it . and I would be very concerned about how the info would be used. I agree with the other objections points made in your correspondence.
